Truncale I have always maintained that we book lovers are a rare breed. As a young teenager with no direction or guidance I sought out peace of mind in the quiet halls of the Chicago downtown library. My reading during those years was unorganized but they opened up a new exciting world to me. This book (Novel Living: Collecting, decorating and crafting with books by Lisa Occhipinti) was written by a book lover and collector. Her approach is unique in that she shows the many ways books can be displayed in a home. My only disagreement with the author is she does not think it is necessary to read every book in her collection. In this respect I have a different take on this issue. I am also an avid book collector but I have read all of my volumes at least once.

Nevertheless, I think this 144 page volume is not just interesting but is also very informative on how to collect, create and preserve your books. This fully illustrated hard cover book is organized into four chapters. The first chapter covers collecting books and lists places to search for rare volumes. The second chapter explains how to create a library of your favorite books. The third chapter deals with methods to preserve your books. The final chapter covers crafting with books. This book is full of photographs and illustrations on how to display your book collection. If you are into collecting books this is a volume you will want to read. Rating: 4 Stars. Joseph J. Truncale (Author: Haiku Moments: How to read, write and enjoy haiku). 2 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Definitely would highly recommend. By Sam Occhipinti Outstanding follow up to her previous book "The Repurposed Library". It has a number of new and innovative decorative uses for books that are unique and creative. Definitely would highly recommend. 7 of 7 people found the following review helpful. A real inspiration. By C. Tostel I was a First Read Winner of this book and it really inspired me. I have a ton of books and was interested in how I could decorate my home in different ways. The book is filled with great ideas on how to display or even do some crafting with books and they all come with step by step instructions on how to do that. After reading the book I am ready to first actually catalog all my books and then utilize some of the great decorating ideas. This beautifully put together book would be a great present for any book lover or a treat for yourself.

In this digital age, the fate of physical books remains in question. Even the concept of curling up with a good book conjures new images. But there remains a sensory thrill to physical books to seeing and feeling them, to turning their pages that makes many of us value them even more as digital reading grows in popularity. In Novel Living, artist Lisa Occhipinti celebrates her love for physical books by presenting us with her unique ideas for collecting and displaying them, for conserving and preserving them, and for crafting with them. Guided by Occhipinti's artful eye, you'll be inspired to build and display collections based on your personal passions and to use books for crafting, either by deconstructing or by copying favorite elements. Amazingly, most of the projects ranging from easy shelving to a headboard constructed of book spines to napkins composed of scans of favorite text passages from books require no special skills or supplies.

Forget a run-of-the-mill bookshelf from a big-box store and create your own fabulous shelf to display flea finds using a handy-dandy ladder . . . from the new book Novel Living.
