I'm biased in favor of this By Ronald Russell I participated with Hal in some of these early workshops, including the ones near Death Valley. which were outstanding experiences. And I had years of history finding clays and materials in the wild, going back to a high school pottery experience. I'm in a few pictures in the book- so this was a bit of nostalgia for me, since my original copy had long since disappeared. I now work in a very high tech area, but the understanding that I could go out and make something useful or beautiful from found materials, using only knowledge, without commercial products, helped me to understand that I could also develop products in high technology. 6 of 6 people found the following review helpful. the bible of primitive firing techniques By Fred J. Aufschlager Being a ceramic artist interested in the more primitive looking ceramic art, I was directed to this book by others. I was not diappointed, as the book succinctly describes primitive firing as done around the world. This includes also the the collection processing and testing of clays found "in the wild", as opposed to clays found in a box, this aspect being a part of the primitive firing experience. Firing methods using no kilns and using kilns are described. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By Marilyn J. Wren The best.
